MSU third in statewide college paper recycling competition

BY BRIAN HIGHLEY
EDITOR

MSU is currently in the running to win a statewide college paper recycling contest. According to recycling/energy conservation coordinator April Haight, as of October 1, MSU has recycled 90,000 pounds of office paper.

Berea College is currently in first place, with Kentucky State University in second and MSU a close third.

Haight said at 14,198 pounds per full-time faculty, staff and students, MSU is just one-half pound per person from being in second place.

Haight said, "The contest has been a year long effort, going from January 1 to December 31 and we are very close to meeting our goal."

Paper materials accepted for recycling include various types of office paper: magazines, newspaper, envelopes, books, pamphlets, Post-It notes, glossy material, white bond paper, computer paper, color bond, folders, tab cards and carbonless multi-sheet forms.

Other materials accepted for recycling are toner cartridges, cardboard and aluminum cans.

Haight said she encourages all employees and students to join in on the competition and to help recycle.

Guideline changes discussed Funding Committee approves proposals

BY TAMARA ENDICOTT
STAFF WRITER

MSU's Student Government Association is an organization made up of 60 members. Each semester, a representative of different cross-sections of the campus population.

The Special Funding Committee is a five-member body formed to approve or deny funding proposals.

"The Special Funding Committee is there to serve as a filter to keep unimportant or small exclusive proposals from tying up time on the Congress floor," said Brian Hatchinson, SGA President.

On October 25, the Special Funding Committee introduced four proposals to SGA's Congress to be voted on. All four were ratified.

The first proposal was to allow $50 to the Residence Life Committee for a Halloween Dance held October 30.

The second proposal, from MSU's Soccer Club, requested $2000 from the present budget and $1000 from the 1996 Spring semester budget to purchase sporting equipment for the team.

The third proposal was presented by MSU's Bowling Team, requesting money to buy team uniforms.

The last proposal, approved in the amount of $3,439.20, was requested by Dr. Lomuel Berry Jr., dean of the Caudill College of Humanities, to help support sending 20 MSU students to the National Association of African American Studies Conference, to be held in February in Houston, Texas.

Berry's proposal was passed with stipulations that one SGA member be a delegate to the convention, three members of SGA be a part of the committee selecting the 20 students who will participate in the trip, and conference attendees be required to conduct a seminar or presentation, open to the entire student body, relating information acquired at the conference, before the end of the 1996 Spring semester.

These provisions were necessary because of funding Guideline 4, that prevents any money being spent on a trip other than for SGA.

Larry Stephenson, Special Funding Committee Chairman, said, "The guidelines have yet to be changed, so we have to work with the guidelines we have. So, with the inclusion of one SGA member among the 20 people who will be selected to go, we got around that guideline."

"That way it would still be in the scope of SGA, because a member of SGA would be on that trip," he said. "We are giving them

Dean seeks applicants for conference

BY BRIAN HIGHLEY
EDITOR

Dr. Lomuel Berry Jr., dean of the Caudill College of Humanities, is taking student applications to attend the third annual conference of the National Association of African American Studies (NAAAS), scheduled for February 13-17 in Houston, Texas.

Berry, executive director of the trip, said he hopes to take at least 20 MSU students who must meet three fundamental criteria.

Students must be in good standing with the University, have a minimum cumulative G.P.A. of 2.5 and must have successfully completed 30 credit hours.

According to NAAAS literature, the major goals of the organization are: To promote acquaintance and group effort among those interested in African Americans, to further the cause of research in African American Studies, to serve as a forum for the expression of research and artistic endeavors in the celebration of the lives and works of African Americans and to stimulate greater public interest in and better informed public opinion regarding African Americans.

Berry said MSU will also benefit from the involvement through the opportunity to recruit prospective students, an opportunity to type selected NAAAS sessions to be placed in MSU's library, and as a means for the University to interact with public school officials (counselors, teachers, etc.) via the Houston public school board.

Berry said NAAAS has a number of beneficial offerings for students.

"This is the only African American based organization that involves all disciplines such as science, education and the humanities," he said. "It provides a greater opportunity to share ideas and cross disciplines."

"It also provides scholars opportunities to have their works published or to present papers at an early stage in their careers. Many organizations don't have student sessions, this organization schedules student research sessions."

Berry said students can submit abstracts of their research projects early and then have until the conference to fully develop them and work with academic advisors. They can then submit their research papers to be critiqued at the conference and receive helpful feedback.

Berry said one of the greatest assets of this type of conference is that the students can "present their research and be critiqued in a positive manner."

He said the conference also provides students with more professional oriented goals an opportunity to network and meet people.

"I want the students to get a broad based experience; to participate in the conference, attend the sessions, meet the professionals and get out into the community and become exposed to something different."

Berry, who attended the last year's conference, said 368 speakers from across the United States, Germany, Japan, South Africa and Canada made presentations.

He said, "You can't imagine the amount of information one can pick up, both professionally and culturally."

Faculty evaluation instrument questioned

BY DAVID GROSS
MANAGING EDITOR

Joe Colledge, a typical MSU student, stumbles into his only class of the day—his 8 a.m. college algebra class—and sees Professor Seaw holding a box of pencils and yet another set of teacher evaluation sheets.

He can't help but smile as he takes his seat in the back row.

"Five minutes tops to fill this out, and back to bed I go," he thinks to himself.

He then makes blindly through his responses to questions he didn't even bother to read—5, 5, 5, 5.

While Joe and some other students may take them lightly, periodic teacher evaluations are a significant factor in deciding merit pay, tenure and promotions for MSU professors.

John C. Pailey, executive vice president for academic affairs, said the university uses the student responses to compare professors and departments with others from across the country.

"The type of evaluation used at MSU, the IDEA Survey, is a national survey that gives students the chance to grade their professors on several aspects of classroom performance."

Pailey said survey responses are also considered when professors become eligible for raises and other forms of advancement.

He said the evaluations serve their purpose, but he admits they are somewhat flawed.

"It disturbs me that some students don't give serious consideration to the surveys and don't fill them out honestly," Pailey said. "But the bottom line is this—the results are significant in the portfolio of professors."

Professors acknowledge many students rush through the surveys and are sometimes less than honest in their responses.

"There is some skepticism among the faculty about how serious students are (on the surveys)," said Kenneth Sexton, an assistant professor for journalism. "But overall, we'd like to think the surveys reflect how the students feel."

Each professor is typically required to be evaluated in two classes each semester and must leave the room while the surveys are filled out by students.

The surveys cover a variety of aspects involved in the performance of professors—such as teaching methods and effectiveness, how well the class hangs together, the amount of work and reading required, knowledge acquired in the class as compared to other classes.

opinions about test content, and many other criteria.

While part of the student population conscientiously make the questions and gives honest answers, some students admit they are less than honest when filling out teacher evaluations.

"(How I respond) depends on whether or not I like the teacher personally," said Michelle Maggard, a senior majoring in English with a minor in theatre.

"Sometimes I'm not brutally honest like I like the teacher," she said.

Lynne Fitzgerald, an associate professor of health, agrees that personal feelings, along with a student is doing gradewise in a course, may influence survey responses.

"Different students take different approaches to the surveys," Fitzgerald said. "A lot depends on how the survey is administered and the students' relationship with the teacher."

A concern of students, faculty and administrators is how much emphasis the responses have on future teacher performance.

Fitzgerald said she looks at the results of student surveys to look for things that can make her performance in that class more efficient.

Sexton said student responses are just one factor he uses when considering how to approach a certain class.

Gregg Roark, a sophomore art and government major, said, "The teachers who care will listen to the students' responses, and the students who care will give their honest opinions about the professors."

"Students who care will not doubt take them seriously, but to the other students it's just a joke," Roark said.

Fitzgerald said the surveys don't measure all classes equally well. She said many of the questions apply to some classes and not to others.

"I would find it interesting to find out what system students would suggest," she said. "Maybe they have a system that would be meaningful to them, one that would cause them to give honest, thoughtful input."

Maggard said a better system than the current one might be to randomly select students and have them participate in an interview with department chairs to discuss particular professors.

Fitzgerald said, currently, the teacher evaluation forms remain the only consistent way students have for evaluating all professors.

one-fifth of their trip funding, that's a substantial amount of money. We felt that we should be part of the selection process also, since we are putting so much money into it."

Berry said he had no problem with the SGA ruling.

"I see no problem with a member of Congress going. I think for me and the students involved, it is a strength," he said.

Seppien said he has mixed feelings about whether there was a problem amending the guidelines instead of sending an SGA member on the trip.

He said, "There may or may not be a problem. Everyone on SGA has seen these guidelines. Apparently, they like them. They voted them in and they have never brought anything else up about them.

"There are 60 other people in Congress who have agreed on those guidelines, not just Special Funding, not just the Executive Board. Sixty other people have had a chance to do something about the guidelines and haven't. If they like it, they like it. Whether it is right or wrong, you can't fight people on what they believe in," said Seppien.

Donald Burke, Special Funding Committee member, disagreed and said he wants to amend the guideline at the November 1 meeting.

"I don't think it is right for us to say we have to have someone from SGA go on the trip, but that's what we had to do in order to pass the proposal," he said. "We look at the campus as a whole. We try to spend the money to affect the most students in the best way."

If Guideline 4 is amended on November 1, Burke said it will no longer be necessary for an SGA member to go on the trip in February.

Hutchinson said he defends the present guidelines.

"What I think the purpose of these guidelines are, is to make spending of the students' money more efficient," he said. "I am a little conservative and what I am scared of is that we are going to spend all this money up front and something really important may come along and we're not going to have it to spend."

Hutchinson said, in regard to a previous denial of funding to the Music Department to fund a trip for the Percussive Team, that the proposal was denied because of the 24-hour time limit Dr. Frank Oddis requested on the decision from SGA.

"They needed the money the next day, and even if the committee had approved it, they couldn't have gotten it because it would've been too late for Dr. Oddis," Hutchinson said.

Hutchinson added: "Because of the article that was written and the readers' response from this over the last couple of weeks, I'm really glad to see it to be quite honest, because it really me know that the students really care about what's going on up here. I've never had that feeling before in the three years I've been in Congress."

Hutchinson said SGA's budget now has a balance of $7,775.

Berry said he and three members of SGA will review all the student applications and select 20 students who will attend the conference. Berry said he expects to get about 40 applications.

Berry said after the students are selected, they will meet with him to get better acquainted and then they will spend five to eight hours this semester and four to five hours next semester getting informed about the conference. "We want no unanswered questions when we depart Kennedy," he said.

Berry said he hopes to have participants selected by November 9 or 10 and said he is excited about the trip.

"I think our students are in for an excellent experience," Berry said.

"They will have the opportunity to be exposed to a major city and cultural experiences at the conference and in Houston."

Berry said the opportunity to attend this conference is open to all students regardless of age or race.

"Students who will be selected will represent the entire campus, not just African Americans. It is open to all students." He said. "I am looking at this trip as an opportunity to learn and everything else is a perk."

Applications may be picked up in the office of the Dean of Humanities in Radler. The deadline for application submission is Wednesday, Nov. 8.

Senate budget plan makes wrong cuts

The U.S. Senate has passed its budget reform legislation, and to true form the Republican-sponsored bill gives more breaks to high income earners and leaves the poor to fend for themselves.

No one can deny the budget needs to be balanced. Whenever legislators try to do the balancing, we wind up with much more complex programs and policies getting the shaft, while waste and unfair breaks for the rich and powerful remain the status quo.

Under the new plan, families with incomes over $100,000 a year will be eligible for a $500-per-child tax credit and tax breaks for college expenses, along with other tax cuts.

People who fall into the higher tax brackets have always enjoyed tax breaks at the expense of the poor.

The working poor, who make up the majority of America's lowest five percent in regards to income, get the axe as far as tax shelters go. Many of these families will lose the earned income credit, a tax refund designed to encourage poor families to work rather than go on government aid.

This kind of blow is totally unfair to poor people who work hard to stay off welfare, and maintain some shred of self-respect. Keeping self-respect is hard for the working poor when Congressmen and Senators constantly lump all poor people into a "lazy welfare loafers" category.

Along with the tax breaks for the wealthy, are the expected cuts in education and Medicare. Rather than balancing the budget by getting rid of tax breaks that benefit the pocket-lining rich, Congress will once again pick on children, the poor and the elderly.

President Clinton has vowed to keep this legislation from going forward in its current format. Even with that, Congress to refuse raising the federal debt limit, Clinton, for now, is holding his ground.

In a country already too much controlled by the rich and powerful, it is time for a real revolution—a revolution where the poor majority take America back from the rich minority.

SGA should address needs of students

Members of the Student Government Association Executive Committee at Morehead State University need to realize they exist to serve the students of MSU, not to determine whether or not a campus organization is "culturally diverse" enough to warrant financial support from SGA.

The SGA Executive Committee has adopted 12 guidelines students and organizations on campus must meet in order to have the "privilege" of using money from a fund generated through their fees.

In the Oct. 11 issue of The Trail Blazer, Special Funds Committee member Dewayne Myhrier, who recently resigned over the funding controversy, said there was no way any group could meet all 12 guidelines.

Some of the more questionable are Guidelines Four, Five and Twelve.

Guideline Four states organizations wishing to get SGA funding must raise 80 percent of the funds themselves. If group members raise that much money, they may as well raise the entire amount and not be forced to beg SGA to give them any portion of money needed.

Guideline Five states only proposals from groups with no budget should apply for funding. This rules out any organization with any budget, no matter how small.

Guideline Twelve states that organizations requesting money need to submit a proposal 30 days before the money is needed. If a group needed money at the beginning of the semester, as some have, then they are out of luck. Some organizations are not able to get their proposals together in time to meet this ridiculous deadline.

These and other guidelines have resulted in several campus organizations being denied money for worthy trips and other causes.

MSU's chapter of The Percussive Arts Society was denied money for a trip to Phoenix, Ariz., in part, because it did not meet Guideline Six, which states the funding must benefit the entire campus. The Percussive Arts Society is an award-winning organization that has received and benefits MSU tremendously.

Dr. Lemuel Berry Jr., Dean of the Caudill College of Humanities, was denied money and treated with disrespect at an Oct. 18 SGA meeting when he requested money to take a group of students to a February conference in Houston. Berry was told his proposal was not in the proper form and should be re-submitted.

At the next SGA meeting, after Executive Committee members had been told Dean Berry was, members wiped the egg from their faces and finally awarded him the money, but with a catch. SGA will help select the 20 students for the trip, and the SGA member in charge of the group (in accordance with Guideline Four, which denies funding for trips except those involving SGA members).

Since when did a dean need a chaperone from SGA? This seems more insulting than the way Dean Berry was treated in his first encounter with the Funding Committee.

SGA should realize individual campus organizations and activities benefit MSU as a whole. There is not, nor will there ever be, one organization that benefits each and every student at MSU. This is a university where diversity collectively benefits all students.

SGA President Brian Hutchinson and the Executive Committee members need to realize they were elected to serve the student body—not the other way around.

Student responds to SGA criticism

This letter is in response to Mr. Dewayne Myhrier's attack on the Student Government Association and the Special Funding Committee of SGA, of which I am a member. Mr. Myhrier would like to have the readers of The Trail Blazer believe that SGA executive council is an oligarchy which hands down guidelines for its hapless Congress members to abide by. In actuality, the so-called "Twelve Commandments" regulating Special Funding allocations were received thoroughly by the entire SGA Congress (including Mr. Myhrier) before ratification. After becoming ratified it was later brought up again for discussion and/or repair by Congress. Evidently there was no problem with the twelve guidelines or else someone would have spoken up if he had any objection, especially someone who was on the Special Funding Committee had his guidelines to use when reviewing any request for funds. The committee met for the first time immediately after the SGA meeting on Wednesday, October 4, whereupon we received our first proposal, which was from the Percussive Arts Society. The proposal stated that the PAS needed the money, if granted by the next day, October 5. However, the passing of such proposals is not merely up to the 'Special Funding Committee'; it must be presented to and voted on by the entire Congress before a decision is reached. Therefore passing the proposal would have been futile since Congress would not have met again until the following Wednesday (Oct. 11), which would be past the specified date that the PAS needed the funds. However, in all the controversy that ensued, this vital bit of information failed to make it to the paper.

The PAS was able to make the proposed trip after all, and I can assure you that all of Congress is glad to bear it, especially the Special Funding Committee members, No. Mr. Myhrier, we "Greek Gods" as you like to call any SGA member who also happens to be Greek, are not in the business of playing power games. All the members of SGA are in the business of representing the students who have elected them. The fact that a large number of them are Greek just reflects the involvement of Greeks on this campus, even though we account for less than 10% of the total population of MSU. The $15.00 SGA fund is accessible to any campus organization that meets the twelve guidelines that Mr. Myhrier himself raised no objections to. The only stipulation is that the request must be submitted in time for the funds to be allocated; which unfortunately, was not the case with the PAS proposal. In the future might I suggest that an organization in need of funds for early in a fall semester submit a proposal before the end of the previous spring semester in order to have enough time for consideration, since SGA committees aren't formed until mid-to-late September, after the elections.

I hope this little FYI bulletin lays to rest any remaining misconceptions students may have about SGA, Executive Council, or the Special Funding Committee.

Weekend activities designed to boost support of MSU athletics

BY CHRIS ERWIN
STAFF WRITER

Last weekend was dubbed the third annual "Keep Eagles Going Weekend" by the Office of Student Activities and was designed to provide support for Eagles Football and to host a wide range of activities for students.

Weekend activities began Friday night at Laughlin with an "open gym" that included volleyball, basketball, live DJ, music, door prizes, a bungee run, a race that "springs" one into a foot race with their opposition, and a sumo wrestling event.

In the sumo competition, students and faculty were placed into oversized, inflatable sumo wrestling suits, and took the ring wrestling each other in front of a crowd of approximately 100 people.

Saturday's activities started with the Heartwalk sponsored by the Morshead Chapter of the American Heart Association.

The 5-mile walk started at Laughlin and proceeded through Morshead.

Around noon, a pre-game tailgate party was held at Jayne Stadium.

Fall Fund-Drive now in progress

WMKY celebrates 30 years on the air

BY JENNIFER MARUSHI
STAFF WRITER

WMKY, MSU's National Public Radio affiliate, is celebrating its 30th anniversary of operation.

This week the station is also holding its annual Fall Fund-Drive, which began Saturday and continues through midnight Friday.

WMKY, at 90.3 on the FM dial, first began operation in 1965, with three hours of programming broadcast daily on just 10 watts of power.

Larry Netherton, general manager of WMKY, said the station was the first in the country to go from just 10 watts to 50,000 watts in one jump.

Netherton said NPR offers some of the most prominent journalists and personalities today, such as Cokie Roberts from "Nighline."

NPR's programming ranges from daily morning and evening news programs to the airing of the St. Louis Symphony Chorus, and "Car Talk," a comedy talk show featuring two car repair brothers. Commercial radio can't explore issues with as much depth, Netherton said.

"NPR was national and international awards all the time. The quality production is unequalled," he said.

"NPR provides news and cultural programming to WMKY, but to obtain this kind of programming it takes money," Netherton added.

He said Congress has proposed a "glide path to zero" in which all federal funding will eventually be taken away from public radio.

Netherton said listeners have shown great support for NPR, which has been trying to present a plan for a public trust fund that would support programming.

Netherton said WMKY pays a lot in fees to receive quality programming. For 1996, news programs from NPR will cost the station over $80,000, he said, and cultural programming will cost almost $17,000.

Other costs include $6,000 in fees to the Associated Press, fees to the KY Network, and the cost of covering local and regional news, including telephone usage and on-site coverage. The satellite used to receive programs costs the station about $600 a year.

Grants received by WMKY, pay only for programming, Netherton said. In the past, these grants were sufficient to also cover production, but costs are up and funding is down, Netherton said.

Netherton said cuts already realized have severely strained WMKY's operating budget.

"The immediate cut in funding was $11,000 and we need to make this up through the fund-drive. Along with replacing that amount, we need to receive the amount we would normally make through the fund-drive, just to sustain ourselves," Netherton said.

This year's goal is set for $20,000. As of Tuesday, only a little more than $6,000 had been pledged.

Netherton said, "We aren't talking about the existence of the station, but what you will get will be a decrease in quality and variety if funding does not increase."

For instance, Netherton said several of the programs will have to be eliminated to cut expenses. Shows like "All Things Considered" and "Car Talk" may eventually be taken off the air at WMKY.

In the past, the station has had fund-drives for specific programs such as "Fossil Friday," "A Prairie Home Companion" and due to lack of listener contributions the shows were taken off the air.

Netherton said WMKY also benefits students by providing a training ground for hands-on radio experience.

Netherton has documented over 800 students who have received experience at WMKY as volunteers, work studies, and interns.

"We have won two national awards for public broadcasting. No other public station in Kentucky can say that, and a student had a major input in one of those awards," Netherton said.

"We list students on our location off-campus. This is experience you can't get in the classroom."

WMKY is a non-profit operation. Persons who would like to support the station through a tax deductible donation may call the station at 783-2700 locally, 1-800-338-9353 toll-free, or mail contributions to the WMKY Fund Drive, MSU Foundation, located in the Palmer Development House. Donors should specify on their check that the donation is for WMKY.

Netherton said, "I am afraid that the importance of (WMKY) may not be realized until after we are gone."

McBride's Angels establishes her as country music superstar

BY BRIAN HIGLEY
EDITOR

Martina McBride began her career selling t-shirts for Garth Brooks and in three short years, she has become a force to be reckoned with in country music. With the release of her third RCA album Wild Angels, McBride proves she is here to stay.

Her last platinum album The Way That I Am was a showcase for pop-country anthems ("My Baby Loves Me"), heart wrenching ballads ("She Ain't Seen Nothing Yet") and social themes (Independence Day). She keeps the formula with Wild Angels, but adds more straightforward country to the mix.

The album opens with its strongest song, the title track.

More pop oriented than country, "Angels" tells the story of everyone having guardian (wild) angels looking out for us in life.

"Safe in the Arms of Love," a song first performed as a ballad by Michelle Wright, is McBride's newest top five single. Love is the common thread tying the album together. This time out, McBride is celebrating love than of lament of where it has gone as she did in The Way That I Am.

McBride does her share of "drowning my sorrows in whiskey" type song, with a remake of Emmylou Harris's song "Two More Bottles of Wine." Instead of a typical ballad, the song has quite a honky tonk feel and is much like her hit of last year "Life #9."

McBride's greatest strength is her voice, which has a strong, clear, heart-breaking quality to it. It is best showcased in two ballads: "Cry on the Shoulder of the Road" and "Phones are Ringing All Over Town."

"Phones" tells a story of a woman who leaves her man after many times of saying she is leaving because of his cheating. Now he is desperately trying to find her. She sings "He's got friends of his calling friends of her's, but she's nowhere to be found/Phones are ringing all over town."

Wild Angels is a good album, but it isn't as great as The Way That I Am. But with each listen the album gets better and confirms McBride is inching her way toward being crowned a queen of country music.

Read the Trail Blazer

Scarlet sent to dead letter office

BY SHERRY STEWART
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

When Hollywood attempts to adapt a classic piece of literature, one of two things usually happen.

The people making the movie have read the book and valiantly try to make a close representation of what the author intended. If it is not exactly a carbon copy of the book, film isn't always an exact science.

The other side of the coin is what happens in the new big screen version of Nathaniel Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter.

Writer Donald Dey Stewart (no relation thank God) and director Roland Joffe have taken the book and turned it into a horrible crash between Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves and The Last of the Mohicans.

Starring publicity bound Demi Moore, as the adulterous Hester Prynne and Gary Oldman as Arthur Dimmesdale, Letter bears little resemblance to the novel.

Ordinarily some allowances can be made when a movie is made from a novel. In this film the characters and story line are unforgivably unrecognizable.

The film begins when Hester arrives in the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1666. She has travelled ahead of her husband to get their things together.

Right away, she is outspoken and determined to follow her own rules. She hires three indentured servants to help her, including a music girl named Matumba.

One day while walking in the woods, she spies on Reverend Dimmesdale taking a bath. Sparks fly and later when she realizes he is the preacher, she says she was impressed with his "passion" for religion.

Another way she flouts the Puritan rules, other than living by herself, is organizing a women's group. In one surprising scene, the women sit around using words like slut and talking about men using their "organs."

Inevitably, Hester and Dimmesdale confess their true love to each other. This scene comes about twenty minutes into the film. There might be such a thing as love at first sight, but the suddenness of the proclamation is more ridiculous than romantic.

Another strange scene is the love scene between the adulterous couple. Taking the proverbial nut in the wheel, the scene is intercut with the serving girl Matumba having her own fun with a candle while taking a bath. It is more irritating than erotic.

From then on the movie strays further and further from the book.

One of the most unusual performances is given by Robert Duvall as Roger Chillingworth. Dimmesdale saving the accused witches by confessing his sin. And they all lived happily ever after in a cottage by the sea.

The other performances in the movie are somewhat interesting. Demi Moore, a questionable choice for Hester, is not unlikeable. The usually reliable and brilliant Gary Oldman (Unforgettable, Brain Sucker's Dracula) seems like the right choice, but with material he is given even he can't save the film. Maybe he shouldn't have listened to his agent.

During the open credits to the movie, it is stated it was freely adapted from the novel. Why the film was even called The Scarlet Letter is unexplainable. While the book concentrates on the consequences of the characters' actions, the movie is about as subtle as a tomahawk to the skull.

The screenplay, written by the man that gave us An Officer and a Gentleman, provides the audience a lot to wonder at. The film includes scenes of attempted rape, murder of those nasty Puritans and whicraft.

Joffe, whose other work includes the Oscar winning The Killing Fields and The Mission, tries hard to make The Scarlet Letter moving and exciting love story, but ultimately it degenerates into a laughable, excessive vanity.

Demi Moore was quoted in the September issue of Q magazine as saying that not very many people have read the book. "If you watch the movie, just for the movie's sake, it works. Because it's not a total happily-ever-after."

Hello? Even if Hawthorne isn't rolling over in his grave, the movie still proves the point that when an adaptation is done well, like in The Age of Innocence, it is truly a joy forever. In the case of this movie, if it isn't broke, don't fix it.

26-13 win over Austin Peay is MSU's first in OVC since '93...

Eagles soar to elusive conference victory

Chris Berry, (wearing the helmet), receives congratulatory hugs Saturday following the Eagles' 26-13 win over Austin Peay State. Berry, the Eagles' quarterback, passed and ran for a combined 166 yards and two scores to lead the Eagles to their first win in the Ohio Valley Conference since 1993. The Morehead State Eagles snapped a 17-game Ohio Valley Conference losing streak with a 26-13 victory over the visiting Austin Peay Governors Saturday.

The Eagles set a school record with 396 rushing yards and averaged a 73-6 loss to the Governors last season.

"How sweet it is," said Eagle head coach Matt Ballard. "We made a vow after the game last year and it's awful sweet."

Anthony Ravize led the Eagles balanced running attack with 136 yards on 22 carries and a touchdown. David Bone rushed 10 times for 116 yards. Chris Berry added 86 yards on 14 carries and a touchdown.

Berry also completed seven of 12 passes for 80 yards and another score. Tian Smalley caught two passes for 52 yards and a touchdown.

Chris Horton led the Governors with 92 yards rushing on nine carries and two touchdowns. Lance Hoeft completed 11 of 27 passes for 131 yards and three interceptions.

Morehead improved to 2-6 overall and 1-5 in the OVC with the win.

Austin Peay fell to 3-6 overall and 2-4 in the OVC.

The Governors blocked an Eagle punt to set up their first score.

Horton raced 32 yards for the touchdown. David Young added the point after.

Austin Peay led 7-0 with 9:20 to play in the first quarter.

The Governors recovered a fumble on the Eagles' next drive to set up another scoring opportunity.

Horton again took the hand off, this time for a 47-yard score.

Young's extra point was wide left. Austin Peay led 13-0 with eight minutes left in the quarter.

Morehead drove 73 yards in four plays for the score.

Berry hit Smalley for the 43-yard touchdown. Ryan Meredith's extra point was good.

The Eagles cut the deficit to 13-7 with just over six minutes to play in the first period.

Morehead's Carl Mack intercepted a Hoeftike pass and returned it 21 yards for the score to tie the game. Meredith's point after was blocked.

The score was tied at 13, with 5:08 remaining in the first.

The Eagles next possession went for 87 yards in nine plays for the go ahead touchdown.

Ravize capped the drive with a one-yard score. Meredith hit the point after.

Morehead led 20-13 after one quarter and held the advantage until halftime.

"I was pleased with our courageous team effort," said Ballard. "We never got down when we were behind. We believed in ourselves and each other."

"We controlled the line of scrimmage," he added. "Just a tremendous effort."

The Eagles drove 73 yards in seven plays to increase their lead with 7:37 to play in the third.

Berry scampared 10 yards for the touchdown. Meredith's extra point attempt was again blocked.

Morehead took the 13-point margin and held on for the victory.

"It's nice to win on our terms and our turf," said Ballard. "We earned it, we deserved it and we took it."

The Eagles finish the season on the road and they travel to Cape Girardeau, Missouri to take on Southeast Missouri Saurde-

Men's Basketball Preview

MSU looks to fill Boardley's shoes in the post

BY JEFF JOHNSON

SPORTS EDITOR

The Morehead State Eagles basketball team received a warm welcome during their recent open scrimmage Saturday at Ellis Johnson arena.

"It was the largest crowd I've seen at a scrimmage since I've been here," said Eagle head coach Dick Fick. "The veterans took over, but I was pleased with all the new guys."

The Eagles finished 10-6 last year in the Ohio Valley Conference, one game behind the OVC champions. Overall the Eagles ended 15-12.

"Last year we had our best season since 1984," said Fick. "I'm more pleased with this team, this early, than I have been with any other."

The Eagles have seven returning players, but replacing Tyrone Boardley's 16.3 points per game is a top priority.

"Our main concern is replacing Tyrone at the post," said Fick. "Right now it's up for grabs."

Marlon Witherspoon, John Humphrey, Mike Strough, Cole Indestad and Luke Lloyd are all in the hunt for the starting post position, Fick said.

"I'm confident one of those guys will step in," said Fick. "Right now we haven't found a guy to be consistent."

Witherspoon averaged just 4.6 point per game and five rebounds last season. He also had 61 blocks and 15 steals.

"Marlon has been a follower," said Fick. "He's becoming more responsible and a leader."

Scroggins added 7.9 points per game with 17.3 rebounds. He also pulled down 123 boards last season.

"It's time for him (Scroggins) to become consistent," said Fick. "He will be one of those guys to step up and establish the post for us."

Indestad scored 10 points in 15 games for the Eagles last year. Luke Lloyd, a freshman from Michigan should help the inside game, Fick said.

"He (Lloyd) has an exceptional ability to relax. He's a good talent," said Fick. "He has a great personality, but he has to improve his work ethic."

Humphrey, a junior transfer, doesn't become eligible until December 16, the game against the Kentucky Wildcats.

"We're excited about him," said Fick. "When he's eligible, we expect him to produce at the high and low posts and pick up the slack."

"All transfers have to step in right away and they know it," Fick said. "They already have experience under their belt at the college level."

Fick said, returning forward, Chris Stone, should also help the Eagles offense.

"Stone had an exceptional season," said Fick. "He should be an excellent swing man for us now."

The Eagles will be counting on returning point-guard, Mark Kinnaird, for leadership as well as his scoring ability.

"He was captain last season because of his toughness," said Fick. "It helped him be himself."

"He hit several big baskets for us last year," said Fick. "With the new guys coming in, Kinnaird will be fresher and it should help his production."

Ivan Colbert, Mark Majick, Ted Deeks and Doug Wyciskalla give the Eagles experience and speed at the guard spot.

"Ivan had a good scrimmage," said Fick. "I'm very encouraged. He should step up this season."

Majick averaged 8.4 points a game and hit 40 percent from the three-point line last season.

Deeks, a freshman from Canton, Michigan, gives the Eagles more depth and speed at the point position.

"He has talent," said Fick. "He has to improve his jump shooting and cut down on turnovers."

"He has to be quick, not in a hurry," Fick added.

Fick said, Wyciskalla, a junior transfer from Northwest Community College, performed well during the scrimmage.

"Doug has an excellent attitude," said Fick. "He shot well and his rebounding was impressive."

Al Dixon, Mark Spurlock and Heston Beverly are trying to make the Eagles as walk-on.

"It's tough to be a walk-on," said Fick. "They handled themselves well during the scrimmage."

The Eagles host the Crusaders in an exhibition game Saturday night at 7:30.

Fick said, these exhibition games help the players and the coaching staff to prepare for the season.

"These exhibition games give us an opportunity to get our kids comfortable in the system," said Fick. "It also gives the coaching staff an opportunity to teach."

"Our goal is to shoot for the top," said Fick. "Our team is committed to being the best they can be and playing to be the best."

Volleyball club hoping for season of wins, support and funding

BY SCOTT CARPENTER
STAFF WRITER

MSU's volleyball club is in search of three things this season: wins, SGA funding and student support.

The men's volleyball club coach, Craig Bere, is currently drafting a proposal to present to SGA for funding. This proposal, if passed, would grant the club money to participate in their conference tournament.

A member of the team David Butler said, "It costs to enter the tournaments. We want to get the University to fund us so we can play in the conference tournaments."

Coach Bere echoed the sentiment, "We are trying to get backing from the University. We don't always get money from MSU, so we have to find it from other places. We want to get some sponsors to help."

Morehead was a founding member of the Ohio River Conference, which includes the University of Kentucky, the University of Louisville, Cincinnati, Xavier, Georgetown, and Eastern Kentucky.

At the end of the season, there is a conference tournament. Without the funding from MSU the team will probably not be able to participate in the tournament.

The team is not always guaranteed of receiving funding from the University, so they have to rely on the athletes to pay dues and they also work at the women's UK game at $13 each.

volleyball matches to earn extra money for the club.

Despite all of this, the club can still be competitive. Last year Morehead finished third in the ORC. The club is hoping to stay competitive this year after graduating a group of very strong players.

Coach Bere said, "We have a good group of guys. The players we have coming in are raw, but they are very determined. They have a lot of height."

David Butler said, "The team is a fairly competitive even though we have a lot of new players. We lost some strong players, but we are improving."

The club competes in round-robin play in the ORC in January. They then move on to participate in some tournaments and single matches.

Bere said, "We will probably participate in the Indiana University, the Michigan, and North Carolina tournaments."

If we get the funding, then we will participate in the regionals and Nationals. These are totally separate from the NCAA and are the club level participants," said Bere.

"The team has some standout players," said Bere. "Denny Murphy, setter, Bill Jones, middle hitter, and a player who is graduating in December, Ryan Kroh."

"Our goal for the season is to finish in the top three. We have done it in the past, and I feel that there is a good chance of that," said Bere. "Louisville is the top team coming in. They didn't lose anyone and got some good new players. They also get great backing in the Louisville area."

Butler said, "It helps to have fans. We have little to no support. We want to host tournaments, but we just don't have the support to do so."

Deadly with a weapon...

Arnett puts experiences with rifle team to use in real-life situations

Helga Arnett is a senior horticulture major from Magoffin County. She also is deadly with a weapon.

After coming to Morehead State University, Arnett began competing on the rifle team. She had never competed in an official rifle team before.

"I believe I would have been better if I had been shooting longer," said Arnett. "I would just shoot for fun at home, and a lot of the competition have been shooting in their high schools competitively for years."

She now practices shooting 10 hours a week and has put her experience to good use in life.

"The experience of the rifle team has helped me," says Arnett. "I can set goals for myself and achieve them. I also set new goals and pursue those."

"We shoot small bore .22 and air rifles. We shoot from the prone, kneeling and off-hand positions," says Arnett. "With the .22's, we shoot from 50 feet and from all three positions. With the air rifles, we shoot from 33 feet from the off-hand position."

The team has already competed against the University of Kentucky, Austin Peay, and Murray State.

This weekend they will compete in three matches, the UK Invitational, Xavier in match competition and UT Martin in match competition.

Toward the end of the season, the OVC tournament will be held. The best teams go to the NCAA's, as well as those individuals who shoot impressively.

Arnett's coach, Hank Patton says, "Helga has been the leader of our team for three years. She is the only person on our team with experience. We, at the least, have a very environment on the team. We are a very tight group."

This sport is the only one where the playing field is exactly equal. This makes the sport very competitive," says Patton.

After finishing third in the OVC last year, the goal for the team says Patton is to finish in the top three again.

Patton says, "Murray State and Tennessee Tech have great backing and are always tough. Our team has come together because of drive and determination. I believe this will help us."

"Helga will finish in the middle individually," says Patton on Arnett's chance in the OVC. "She is a 1050 shooter with the .22's and a 372 shooter with the air rifles."

Scoring in the sport is kept by every bulls-eye hit being worth 10 points. There are a total of 100 points on one sheet. There is a total of 1200 points for every .22 small bore match. There is a total of 400 points in the air rifle competition.

Coach Patton says he thinks Arnett's average of 1050 in the .22 shooting shows the potential that is in Arnett.

"What really hurts us is that we are the only school to have both a men's and women's team," says Patton. "The other schools can combine their best shooters onto one team."

Arnett says her future goals are to be in the NCAA's and to be break 1100 with the .22's this year.

MSU cross country team wins OVC title

The MSU men's cross country team took first place Friday in the Ohio Valley Conference championship.

The Eagles scored a meet low 36 points.

Coach Dan Lindsey said, "The cross country team represents MSU well and in a positive fashion. They are a coach's delight."

Morehead had four runners finish in the top ten in the 8km run.

Jeff Faith took second with a time of 26:05. Anthony Teas finished fourth with a time of 26:33. Kevin Bryant took fifth with a time of 26:41 and Ole Hegghem finished ninth with a time of 26:57. Bruce Foley also was not finishing 16th with a time of 27:19.

"When you have worthy opponents like the OVC, you feel great when you prevail," said Lindsey.

The team still has more racing to do before its season will end. The team will soon be running in the NCAA District Championship at Greenville, North Carolina.

Lindsey said, "We work year round to get this point. The guys are not just good athletes, but also tremendous people."

The women's team took sixth place in the 5km run at the OVC championship.

Intercollegiate western horse show to be held Saturday

Morehead State University will host Equestrian Teams from Kentucky and Tennessee in a western intercollegiate horse show this weekend.

The eight participating teams will bring together over 80 riders ranging in skill levels from beginning to open. Riders competing in the beginning class have had little to no formal training, while riders qualifying for the open level have previously participated in the intercollegiate show circuit. Open riders are also qualified to compete in the reigning pattern.

The Morehead team will provide all of the horses used in the show although participants may have never ridden the horse they have selected by draw. They are given no warm up time to prepare.

"It's a lot of hard work," said Joy Leonard, student coordinator of the show. "When you sit back and watch everyone enjoying themselves and having a good time, then you know it was worth it all."

The two day event will be held

Saturday and Sunday at the Derrickson Agricultural Complex. The schedule will be the same both days with the first group of classes beginning at 9 a.m. There will be a break after the completion and the second group will enter the arena at 2 p.m. There is no admission charge.
